

Bull at large

by Kristen Haire

A young bull Hereford has been gallivanting around the southeastern parts of New Tecumseth since the evening of May 10. Minutes after being delivered as a gift to his new owner on the 3rd Line, the bull, that answers to "Fred", left his enclosure. Upon leaving through the fence, and terrifying the nearby donkeys, Fred headed south along the hydro corridor.

His escape prompted his owners and neighbours to spend the rest of the evening trying to catch him, until darkness postponed the effort.

Fred is still at large.

He was last seen heading north from the 3rd Line up the hydro corridor.

An orphan from birth, Fred is a very friendly young bull who is about a year old. He was hand fed, and raised with plenty of human interaction. Purchased as a pet, Fred may be on the run as he is due to be castrated. Weighing approximately 450 lbs, he is brown and white, with a mostly white head.

Thought to be looking for a new herd, his owners are asking for your assistance. He excels at squeezing through impossibly small gaps in fences, and enjoys scaring horses. Is Fred in your backyard?
